>>2600470

OK I'll take a shot at it even though I'm not sure.

>Calculate probability.

We will multiply estimated probabilities of different events in order to compute a compound probability.

>What is the mathematical probability that a rogue missile launched at/near the runaway plane?

Cannot parse precisely.

What's the chance (someone) launched a rogue missile at/near a runaway plane?

Near zero, I would think. Unless they knew in advance that it was going to runaway because it was entirely their op... in which case the probability would be high.

>Was he a trained pilot?

News said no. But he flew like one. Some opined he could learn that from a flight simulator. Others opined he could not. Flight instructors were among the ones who opined.

>How fast did intercept occur?

Sheriff said the F15s arrived within "a few minutes"

>Think missile intercept.

If ourguys were planning to intercept a missile they would takeoff fast and fly supersonic to get there. They did arrive fast. One anon calculated 1500 knots just under their max speed Mach 2.5 (1600 kn). And they didn't waste any time warming up the planes: timing suggested they were already waiting to take off.

>Think aircraft.

Think about the runaway a/c or the F15s that intercepted?

>Outside of standard deviation?

Now having computed the compound probability is that number so many standard deviations out that we can conclude no coincidence was involved, that ourguys knew everything that was going to happen and were totally prepared for it?

>Do people travel to islands to [Fish]?

[Fish] in a figurative sense... fish for what... human prey?

>How many billionaires own islands?

Yup, seems to be a thing among the ultra rich.

>How many billionaires live on islands?

They own, but do not live there.

NEWS REPORT ON MISSING KIDS IN HAITI

From: Hillary Clinton
To: Cheryl Mills
Date: 2010-01-22 10:26
Subject: NEWS REPORT ON MISSING KIDS IN HAITI

The UN mission in Haiti has stepped up surveillance of roads, UNICEF officials said.

Mr Legrand said there was separate but only anecdotal evidence of people taking children by road to the neighbouring Dominican Republic and loading children on to planes.

"We have seen over the past years many children being taken out of the country without any legal procedure," he said. "This is going on. This is happening now. We are starting to have the first evidence of that, this is unquestionable." He was unable to give details on the 15 missing children or their condition or clearly connect the anecdotal observations in Haiti's chaos with trafficking.

The cases were documented by social workers and by partner non-governmental organisations working for UNICEF in hospitals.

COINTELPRO (Portmanteau derived from COunter INTElligence PROgram) (1956-1971) was a series of covert, and at times illegal,^{[1][2]} projects conducted by the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) aimed at surveilling, infiltrating, discrediting, and disrupting domestic political organizations.^{[3][4]} FBI records show that COINTELPRO resources targeted groups and individuals that the FBI deemed subversive,^[5] including the Communist Party USA,^[6] anti-Vietnam War organizers, activists of the civil rights movement or Black Power movement (e.g. Martin Luther King Jr., Nation of Islam, and the Black Panther Party), feminist organizations,^[7] independence movements (such as Puerto Rican independence groups like the Young Lords), and a variety of organizations that were part of the broader New Left. The program also targeted white supremacist groups including the Ku Klux Klan and nationalist groups including Irish Republicans and Cuban exiles.^[8] The FBI also financed, armed, and controlled an extreme right-wing group of former Minutemen, transforming it into a group called the Secret Army Organization that targeted groups, activists, and leaders involved in the Anti-War Movement, using both intimidation and violent acts.^{[9][10][11]}

Edward Snowden

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Edward Joseph Snowden (born June 21, 1983) is an American computer professional, former Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) employee, and former contractor for the United States government who copied and leaked classified information from the National Security Agency (NSA) in 2013 without authorization. His disclosures revealed numerous global surveillance programs, many run by the NSA and the Five Eyes Intelligence Alliance with the cooperation of telecommunication companies and European governments.

In 2013, Snowden was hired by an NSA contractor, Booz Allen Hamilton, after previous employment with Dell and the CIA.^[1] On May 20, 2013, Snowden flew to Hong Kong after leaving his job at an NSA facility in Hawaii, and in early June he revealed thousands of classified NSA documents to journalists Glenn Greenwald, Laura Poitras, and Ewen

66) During World War I, the need arose to decrypt coded radio messages. Decryption of electronic messages (Signals Intelligence) was primarily a military operation. In 1952 President Truman established the NSA to handle the decryption and dissemination of such messages.

#Qanon

National Security Agency

UNITED STATES AGENCY

to provide an effective, unified organization and control of the communications intelligence activities of the United States conducted against foreign governments, to provide for integrated operational policies and procedures pertaining thereto.

The NSA was created in part out of the belief that the importance and distinct character of communications intelligence warranted an organization distinct from both the armed forces and the other intelligence agencies. While it operates within the Department of Defense, the NSA also belongs to the Intelligence Community (a coalition of 17 intelligence agencies) and as such acts under the supervision of the director of national intelligence. The director of the NSA is a military officer of flag rank (i.e., a general or an admiral) with a minimum of three stars. Not being a creation of Congress, the NSA often acts outside of congressional review; it is the most secret of all U.S. intelligence agencies.

https://pbs.twimg.com/media/DkumMFIU8AAnP0_.jpg

67) As technology and culture have evolved, the tools of the trade and the responsibilities of the NSA have changed.

They no longer limit their mission to military operations.

The NSA has a capability of gathering all our private communications if they wish to do so.

#Qanon

68) The 4th amendment provides for our privacy and requires the government to show probable cause before surveilling us.

How do we reconcile the 4th amendment's protection against intrusion with the NSA's ability to gather our communications?

#Qanon

69) A distinction must be made between a government agency having our communications in a database and someone knowing what those messages mean.

#Qanon

70) Do you believe the NSA has the manpower available to read and understand all the communications of billions of people?

#Qanon

71) Through "Upstream collection," the NSA gathers large chunks of data from the internet.

That data is seldom accessed by anyone.

What actual harm is done if the NSA stores a billion messages a day in a database that are never read by anyone?

#Qanon

Upstream collection

Upstream collection is a term used by the National Security Agency (NSA) of the United States for intercepting telephone and Internet traffic from the Internet backbone, i.e. major Internet cables and switches, both domestic and foreign. Besides the Upstream collection, NSA also gathers information from Internet communications through arrangements with Internet companies under the program codenamed PRISM.^[1] Both the Upstream programs and PRISM are part of the Special Source Operations (SSO) division, which is responsible for collection in cooperation with corporate partners.

One of the slides of a presentation about the PRISM-program describes Upstream as "collection of communications on fiber cables and infrastructure as data flows past" and says the Upstream collection is conducted under the following four major surveillance programs:^[2]

- FAIRVIEW
- BLARNEY
- STORMBREW
- OAKSTAR

The FAIRVIEW, BLARNEY and STORMBREW programs are for collecting data at facilities in the United States, whereas OAKSTAR is an umbrella for eight different programs used for collection outside the US. Under all four programs, the collection takes place in cooperation with commercial telecommunication companies, both inside and outside the US.^[3]

<https://pbs.twimg.com/media/Dku3em8VsAAYp2o.jpg>

72) The battle during the last 30 years over privacy has been waged over the government's need to access private information of some individuals to assure national security and their obligation to uphold the 4th amendment.

#Qanon

73) The creation of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court arose from a perceived need to safeguard against intelligence overreach by the government.

#Qanon

<https://pbs.twimg.com/media/Dku3oJeVAAE8Z3D.jpg>

USA Freedom Act

The USA Freedom Act (H.R. 2048^[4], Pub.L. 114–23^[4]) is a U.S. law enacted on June 2, 2015 that restored in modified form several provisions of the Patriot Act, which had expired the day before. The act imposes some new limits on the bulk collection of telecommunication metadata on U.S. citizens by American intelligence agencies, including the National Security Agency. It also restores authorization for roving wiretaps and tracking lone wolf terrorists.^{[3][4]} The title of the act originally was a ten-letter backronym (USA FREEDOM) that stood for Uniting and Strengthening America by Fulfilling Rights and Ending Eavesdropping, Dragnet-collection and Online Monitoring Act.

The bill was originally introduced in both houses of the U.S. Congress on October 29, 2013, following publication of classified NSA memos describing bulk data collection programs leaked by Edward Snowden that June. When it was re-introduced in the 114th Congress (2015–2016), it was described by the bill sponsors as "a balanced approach"^[5] while being questioned for extending the Patriot Act through the end of 2019.^[6] Supporters of the bill said that the House Intelligence Committee and House leadership^[7] would insist on reauthorizing all Patriot Act powers except bulk collection under Section 215 of the Patriot Act.^[8] Critics assert that mass surveillance of the content of Americans' communication will continue under Section 702 of FISA which does not expire until 2017^{[9][10]} and Executive Order 12333^{[9][11]} due to the "unstoppable surveillance-industrial complex"^[12] despite the fact that a bipartisan majority of the House had previously voted to close backdoor mass surveillance.^[7]

Why was NO SUCH AGENCY created?

The NSA was created to assure national security through the collection, decryption, and dissemination of signals intelligence.

If members of government sold out their loyalty to foreign powers?

If the government had been taken over by traitors?

[...] to collect the information, that enables us to perform our missions successfully – to defend the nation and to protect U.S. and allied troops abroad."^[9] In terms of access, an NSA press statement reads that there is no "unchecked analyst access to NSA collection data. Access to XKeyscore, as well as all of NSA's analytic tools, is limited to only those personnel who require access for their assigned tasks." and that there are "[...]stringent oversight and compliance mechanisms built in at several levels. This article is about the social networking service. For the type of directory, see Face book.

Facebook is an American online social media and social networking service company based in Menlo Park, California. Its website was launched on February 4, 2004, by Mark Zuckerberg, along with fellow Harvard College students and roommates Eduardo Saverin, Andrew McCollum, Dustin Moskovitz and Chris Hughes.

The founders initially limited the website's membership to Harvard students. Later they expanded it to higher education institutions in the Boston area, the Ivy League schools, and Stanford University. Facebook gradually added support for students at various other universities, and eventually to high school students. Since 2006, anyone who claims to be at least 13 years old has been allowed to become a registered user of Facebook, though variations exist in this requirement, depending on local laws. The name comes from the face book directories often given to American university students. Facebook held its initial public offering (IPO) in February 2012, valuing the company at $104 billion, the largest valuation to date for a newly listed public

Special Agent Andrew McCabe stood tall over the last 8 months, when small people were trying to tear down an institution we all depend on. He served with distinction for two decades. I wish Andy well. I also wish continued strength for the rest of the FBI. America needs you.
