We never left.
It's time to return publicly.

Exactly three years later, to the day, the @q account was created on Truth Social. The account was created before those of Devin Nunes and President Trump.

Was this a coincidence, or is this is how Q is returning in a more public way?

In another happy coincidence, according to Tech Crunch, Truth Social's proprietary account registration service is called "Pepe."

<https://techcrunch.com/2022/02/21/trumps-truth-social-app-launch-store-errors/>

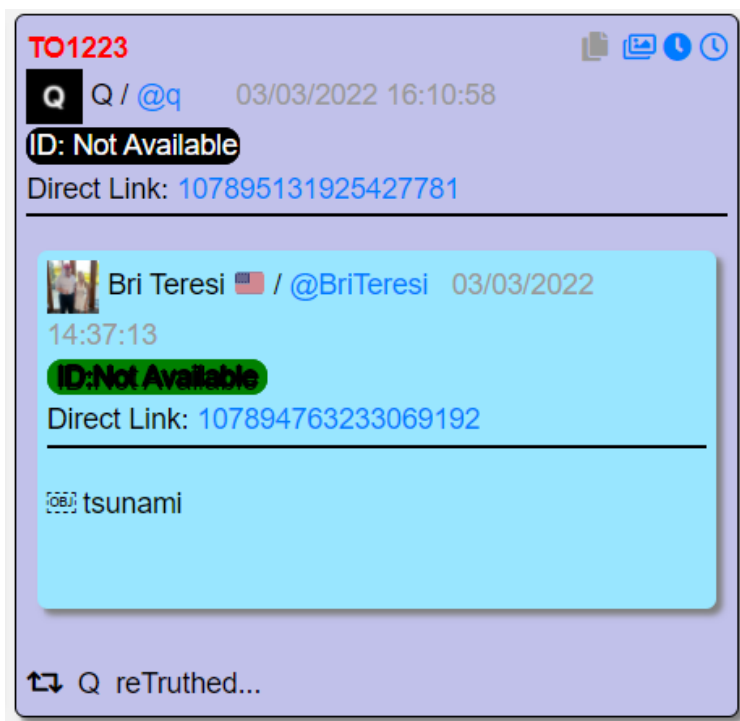

Donald Trump's media group released its TRUTH Social iOS app today in the U.S., but a scan of the app's API using publicly available tools revealed that it already closed itself to registrations (also, the scan showed that its "proprietary account registration microservice" is named "Pepe," which is also the name of a meme with racist connotations).

A number of tech people that work for Truth Social appear to be Q followers. @JamesQ, an app developer, posted this message today.

@Q reposted Bri Teresi who wrote tsunami.

Q reposted @Kara's tribute to the weekend and added the hashtag #FlannelFriday.

Backstory on Flannel Friday: Kash Patel posted a photo saying he was having a beer with @q. People noticed the person in the photo was wearing a flannel shirt and thought it might be Q.

Pepe Lives Matter thought it was notable.

In honor of @q we should all wear flannel tomorrow.
It's time to get sexy.

replying to @PepeLivesMatter, @q
I have enough flannel to make this happen.

@Q reposted Ken McGrath's photo of a bald eagle wrapped in a flannel shirt.

@q I'm not as high profile here but - Alrighty Anons - where am I at tonight?

🔄 Q reTruthed...

The post by Little King was a parody of a post by @q, who on Kash Patel's birthday posted a photo and asked anons to find them.
